Paris, July 22nd 2008

Société Générale is joining forces with Nexity for the construction of its future trading floor building at La Défense

On July 18th 2008, Société Générale and Nexity have entered into an agreement for the construction of a trading floor building, in the form of a sale with future completion.

With a net habitable space of 43,000 m² and overlooking the RN 314 main road, the trading floor building will house 5 trading floors each with a surface area of 3,600 m². It will be situated close to the Société Générale towers at La Défense.

Work on this specific building, designed by the architect Jean Mas (Ateliers 234), started on July 21st and delivery is scheduled for the beginning of 2012. The Trading Floor building is being constructed to High Environmental Quality standards (HEQ ®).

This development has been launched by Société Générale as part of the renewal plans for La Défense. It also reflects the Group's commitment to Paris as a financial center, which will be enhanced by the construction of one of the largest trading floor operations in Europe.
